WebHealer is proud to announce that it has been selected by the Board of the Acupuncture Association of Chartered Physiotherapists (AACP), as the preferred supplier of websites to association members.

After a period of review and consultation by the Board of the AACP, WebHealer is proud to announce its selection as preferred supplier of websites to AACP members. The appointment was announced internally to members in the March issue of the AACP newsletter, and has been publicly acknowledged on the AACP website today. A key factor in the board's decision was WebHealer's long standing and successful preferred supplier status with other respected associations of health professionals, such as the Association of Reflexologists. Other important elements of the WebHealer service which appealed to the AACP are WebHealer's focus on achieving results for clients and the flexibility of their websites for AACP members to make their own updates.

WebHealer is increasingly being recognised and recommended by a growing number of professional therapy associations, as a company that provides easy to use websites that get results for their clients.

Background to the AACP

The Acupuncture Association of Chartered Physiotherapists (AACP) is a professional network that is affiliated with the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy (CSP). It was founded over 20 years ago and has continued to grow steadily to become an organisation that now represents over 6500 physiotherapists, each of whom are seeking to promote the integration of evidence-based acupuncture into mainstream physiotherapy for the management of pain and systemic conditions.

On appointing WebHealer, the AACP said: "The Board of AACP has chosen WebHealer as the recommended supplier of websites to our members. The Board were particularly impressed by their commitment to helping AACP members achieve results via the internet. Their websites feature easy self-updating tools, and highly effective search engine optimisation, and their "mission" is to attract more patients to their clients' practices."
